

Testimonials

From former employees:

“I could present myself to absolute strangers and get them interested enough in me and my product to listen and buy my product. I rely on these interpersonal skills when negotiating with investors, suppliers, employees, and/or customers on a daily basis. Looking at the successful people in the world today, I believe that all of them got there because they learned how to sell themselves. Working at Requisite Business Skills (RBS) was where I learned this skill.”

“RBS is second to none in employment earnings and quality work experience. Every element of the organization trains and equips its employees to perform at levels that exceed common expectations. RBS’s Internship is the training ground for success in any classroom, field, or industry.”

-Spencer Taylor (PMG 2004-2006); Current Profession: Insurance Actuator

“At RBS I learned how to handle rejection and move on to the next opportunity. I developed the ability to communicate, build rapport, and be persuasive. I had to learn to motivate myself. I learned to listen empathically and effectively. I’m currently the marketing manager for a large insurance company overseeing the entire state of Utah. I’ve hired, managed, and trained employees, sold million dollar accounts to fortune 1000 companies, and set up joint ventures with other businesses. This Internship helped me become a successful business professional more than any other experience I’ve had.

“The experience I gained working for RBS has helped me tremendously. The money was great, but it was more valuable to learn and practice how to communicate effectively. Communicating with people all day long gave me time to evaluate and perfect those skills. I had no idea how much this would help later in my life. I familiarized myself with the inner workings of a business. I learned how to efficiently coordinate between departments, how to persuade, to manage and to teach new skills to employees to better themselves. I look back now at my RBS years with much fondness, for there I found my career in marketing.
